LEARNING CITIES FOR MIGRANTS INCLUSION

THE LECIM PROJECT

LeCiM is a mainstreaming project aiming to involve policy makers, local authorities and public and private stakeholders on projects identified as good practices at European level, for the inclusion of migrant people. In particular, the emphasis is integration, in the strategies and actions of welfare policies and targeted interventions, such as, for example, support measures for training, job placement, cultural mediation, housing policies, and so on.

The project provides the transferring of three best practices in three target cities on the issue, according to their special expressed needs.

Following research activities and a focused Contact seminar, the matching between best practices and target cities will be:

from Berlin (Germany), to Catania (Italy),

from Dunkeque (France) to Santander (Spain), from Bologna (Italy) to Budapest (Hungary).

The three best practices were chosen within the transnational partnership involved in the project, based on previous experiences of success on the theme of social inclusion of migrants, while the 3 cities targeted were identified based on a needs analysis held by the partners of the cities concerned, who stressed the need to implement interventions to promote social inclusion of migrants in their respective territories.

PROJECT OBJECTIVES

- Improving the capacity of developing local partnerships to identify and implement a plan of training activities for adult immigrants, combined with other public policies and programs, which aim to social inclusion and economic migrants
- To make known to main policy makers, authorities and management of public funds to local governments, the successful experiments carried out in favour of the migrant population, their potential by providing input on how best to develop a policy framework to support the activities of local and how to distribute public funds to support these experiences
- To gather around the same table all the stakeholders in the process of integration between training activities and the welfare system of the city, to improve the management capacity of networks and umbrella organizations of local development partnerships (Public Authorities, Local development Agencies, etc). through a participatory approach
